Blunt Meets with Students from Camdenton R-III's FIRST LASER Team

WASHINGTON - U.S. Senator Roy Blunt (Mo.) met with students from Camdenton R-III's FIRST LASER robotics after-school program as part of their visit to Washington, D.C., this week.

The Camdenton LASER team launched in 2009 with 21 students and has vastly grown in size to more than 250 active students today. Participants in the program have won awards in robotics competitions regionally, as well as globally. In 2015, the group participated in an international tournament, winning a robotics award in Sydney, Australia.
